

Classics Study Days

2002 - 2003

Greece and Rome at The British Museum

Thursday 30 January 2003

During this study day, students can combine lectures with gallery talks, handling sessions and gallery study sessions. The programme will cover topics from Archaic and Early Classical and Classical Greece and also the Augustan context for the Aeneid and Roman Satire as revealed through art and archaeology. The content and format of the day will appeal to Classical Civilisation students and to classical linguists. Speakers will include Robin Osborne on Pericles and the Parthenon and Susan Woodford on the invention of red-figure as well as staff from the British Museum.

Mycenaean Greece

Thursday 6 March 2003

This study day will cover several aspects of the archaeology of the Mycenaean world. It will be useful both for students of the OCR archaeology unit and for students reading Homer. Talks will focus on what archaeology can tell us about aspects of Mycenaean life such as warfare and religion and about the connections between mainland Greece and the other cultures of the eastern Mediterranean. Students will also have study activities to complete in the galleries. Speakers will include Ken and Diana Wardle and British Museum curators.
